This chart illustrates the important connection of human resources metrics to the University's overall strategy and specific human resources strategies. Institutional indicators are higher level measures of how the University is performing, and operational indicators are more likely to be used at a college/unit level to gauge performance in the area of human resources. These metrics are the focus for 2010; other HR metrics are available.